KNeoMedia confirms expansion into broader US market

- KNeoESP content trials underway in Buffalo (New York State) and Newark (State of New Jersey)
- Trials to commence shortly in three more US States
- More sales of Seat Licences in NYC are pending

Online education publisher KNeoMedia Limited ("KNeoMedia" or the "Company") (ASX: KNM) is pleased to confirm the roll-out of its Special Needs educational content into new territories in the United States as reported at the Company's Annual General Meeting.

The Company's KNeoWorld Special Needs learning and development software is now being trialled in a number of schools in two new cities, Buffalo (New York State), and Newark (New Jersey), confirming that sales of Seat Licences will shortly materialise outside of New York City.

The Company is securing 30-day trials via education departments in the respective cities, as opposed to targeting schools individually. This way, education departments can pre-qualify the content for schools and therefore streamline the sales process.

The Company is also pleased to confirm trials of KNeoWorld Special Needs are anticipated shortly in three more US States together with sales of Seat Licences to more schools in New York City.

Management commentary

KNeoMedia's Chief Executive Officer James Kellett said: "We are undertaking a measured roll-out of our content into new US States, with schools in New Jersey and New York State easily serviced from our New York City headquarters. A 30-day trial is the first stage in the sales process and we have had a 100% success rate with this approach.

Also noteworthy is the fact that we are entering new markets by engaging directly with education departments in these cities. These introductions are being made by our recently appointed Advisory Board members, and we are grateful for their support and introductions. Accessing these markets would take much longer without their support, and their introductions is the reason why we expect trials will be underway in more states shortly. They have validated and pre-qualified our Special Needs content."

KNeoMedia also expects to report on more Seat Licence sales in New York City very soon. This market still has considerable upside.
